

Knowledge for Resilience in the Peace

A CROSS COMMODITY PODCAST SERIES

By Nadia Mori

The Peace Region is rich in active producer and grower focused agricultural associations.

To amalgamate our joint knowledge and foster cross-commodity collaboration our shared goal of building resilient and viable farming & ranching operations in the Peace Region, the PRFA of BC is joining forces with:

- the Peace Region Forage Seed Association (PRFSA),
- the BC Grain Producers Association
- and NEAT's Northern Cohort.

The project partner associations have a long standing history of bringing applied research, innovation and regionally adapted knowledge to a range of producers and growers. One limiting factor to move knowledge from research findings to farm applications, is the need for a bridge between the lab and the field. →

Similarly, you may be curious about applied knowledge gathered by peers but may not have the opportunity to inquire for more details at the source.

A podcast can offer a bridge between producers, specialists and researchers by packaging the information into a downloadable, on-the-go audio file.

For example, if new research findings are published on reduced carbon emissions in no-till cropping systems, the information is likely first packaged in a scientific article. These articles are often locked behind paid journals and even if they are accessible, don't make for the best bedtime reading material. Researchers on the other hand are busy proposing, implementing and analyzing their latest research, leaving little time and financial means to translate the scientific journal article into a format more easily consumable.

While each association is well connected with the members of its community, this project aims to build relationships across the various commodities.

After all, there are many shared underlying challenges such as extreme weather events, a short growing season and the desire to earn a living while doing what we love.

The collaborating associations will take turns in providing topic and speaker suggestions, giving each partner equal opportunity to participate in the podcast series.

As a member we invite you to provide any suggestions on whom you would love to hear interviewed on the podcast or what topics you would like to hear covered.

For a small teaser introduction to the podcast you can go to our Website <https://peaceforage.bc.ca/information/podcasts/> or you can navigate to Podbean and search for "Knowledge for Resilience". While you are there, hit the Follow button so you will automatically be notified when new episodes are available.

Support for this project was provided by the BC Hydro Agricultural Compensation Fund and contributions from all partner associations.

Nadia (PAG, MSc) obtained her Master of Science along with her acting degree from the University of Saskatchewan. She has worked as an extension agrologist for over 10 years before becoming an independent contractor. As a voice actor she has voiced a number of audiobooks available on Audible.

UPCOMING WEBINAR Farm Scale Vermicomposting

April 13th at noon

Peace River Forage Association of British Columbia

with Rhonda Sherman,
NC State University
Register through our website
peaceforage.bc.ca/events